This is the type of thing that alienates a dev company from their fans... it's damaging the community and I don't understand it tbh. Yes, it's their intellectual property, but I think most of us know that and give credit where due to bungie and their content producers. Nobody is stealing food from their table by including parts of cutscenes and OST in videos, especially for fan-made content, which essentially advertises the game and the company free of charge for them... this is not right.
